Let's combine cold rigour with passion

As compassionate judges in the US, when one considers the bail amounts on trials for different crimes, it becomes apparent that they do not respect the rule of law and comply with severe standards. The South African court outcomes consistently do not match the American ones. The bail amounts of R1000 for rape and R2000 for alleged drunken driving are a mockery of justice. When one considers the bail amounts on both trials for different crimes, it becomes apparent that the South African court does not respect the rule of law and comply with severe standards.

When one considers the bail amounts on both trials for different crimes, it becomes apparent that they do not respect the rule of law and comply with severe standards. The South African court outcomes consistently do not match the American ones. The bail amounts of R1000 for rape and R2000 for alleged drunken driving are a mockery of justice.

When one considers the bail amounts on both trials for different crimes, it becomes apparent that they do not respect the rule of law and comply with severe standards. The South African court outcomes consistently do not match the American ones. The bail amounts of R1000 for rape and R2000 for alleged drunken driving are a mockery of justice.

When one considers the bail amounts on both trials for different crimes, it becomes apparent that they do not respect the rule of law and comply with severe standards. The South African court outcomes consistently do not match the American ones. The bail amounts of R1000 for rape and R2000 for alleged drunken driving are a mockery of justice.